Building a generation of political leaders in Global Health promote efficient and sustainable policies for improved global health systems in alignment with the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs)
what we do

UNITE focuses its activity in providing its members with technical and parliamentary engagement support, connecting them with affected communities, international organizations, civil society, academia, and governments, providing them with the right advocacy tools at the right moment, in the adequate format, to act accordingly in their Parliaments.

Priority areas of work:
- Human rights and equitable access to health
- Strengthening of health systems
- Global health architecture and security
